

How timely was Garrick Tremain's cartoon in the ODT the other day? I have to say my pet hate in relation to the lagoon causeways are those deposits of dog pooh in plastic bags. I know horse pooh makes more of a mess, but once dry can easily be kicked under a bush, which is what I do from time to time (not recently though). But those plastic bags of dog pooh, I simply cannot understand the thinking behind collecting the dog pooh in a plastic bag tying it up and then throwing it into the undergrowth. I mean wouldn't it make more sense to just kick the pooh into a bush. I'll leave Mr Tremain to ingeniously illustrate my point.

Dare we hope that winter is nearly over?
